RULES FOR SPELLING.

From Stickney's "Word by Word."

1. Most nouns form plurals by adding s.
2. Nouns ending in sounds like s, sh, ch, x, and z cannot take an s sound, and so add a syllable in es.
3. Final y following a consonant is changed to i, and es added as above. Some nouns ending in f change the f to v.
4. Final y following a vowel is retained, and the plural is formed as in Rule I.
5. Words ending in silent e drop the e before taking a suffix beginning with a vowel; except in words ending in ce or ge, when the e is retained to show the sounds of c and g, which are soft only before e or i.
6. Final y following a consonant is changed to i unless the suffix begins with i.
7. If preceded by a vowel, the y is retained, as a rule.
8. Monosyllables ending in a single consonant preceded by a single vowel, double the final consonant on adding a syllable beginning with a vowel.
9. But the final consonant remains single if it is preceded by a consonant or by two vowels.
10. The letters f, l, and s, at the end of monosyllables and after single vowels, are generally double.

SOME RULES FOR PUNCTUATION.

Compiled from Tarbell's "Lessons in Language."

Proper nouns should begin with capital letters.

A common noun joined to a proper noun so as to become a part of the same name should begin with a capital.

Titles of office or respect used with names of persons should begin with capitals and be separated by commas. A title which follows a name should be separated from it by a comma.

The words I and O should always be capital letters.

All the leading words in the heading or title of a writing should begin with capitals, and a period should be placed at the end of every such heading.

The first word of every sentence and of every line of poetry should begin with a capital letter.

Names of the Deity and all words that refer directly to Him should begin with capitals.

The words north, south, east, west, when used to denote a section of the country, should begin with capital letters; but when they denote direction merely, they should begin with small letters.

The names of the months and of the days of the week, but not of the seasons, should begin with capitals.

In the introduction of a letter all words at the beginning of a line and all nouns should begin with capital letters. The parts of a date should be separated by commas.

The parts of the name of a place should be separated by commas.

The words of a series should be separated by commas; but when all the words of a series are connected by and, or some such word, the commas should be omitted.

A comma should generally be placed after yes or no at the beginning of an answer.

A noun used to explain the meaning of another noun must, with its modifiers, be separated from the rest of the sentence.

Clauses should usually be separated by commas.

Use O, without a comma, before the name of a person spoken to, but use oh, rather than O, in all other cases.

A period should be placed at the end of every declarative and imperative sentence.

A period should follow every initial of a name and every abbreviated word.

A period should follow the figure which gives the number of a rule, example, etc., but not the figure which gives the number of the page.

A Roman numeral should be followed by a period.

An interrogative sentence is followed by an interrogation point [?].

An exclamatory sentence is followed by an exclamation point [!].

An exclamation point should be used after every interjection except O, if it expresses strong feeling or emotion.

When the exact words of another are written or printed, they should be enclosed in quotation marks [“ ”].

When a word is divided at the end of a line, a hyphen [-] should be used to show that the remainder of the word is on the next line. In dividing a word, care should be taken to make the division between syllables.
